

James J. Xia, MD, PhD, MS

Dr. Xia earned his MD degree in 1987 from Shanghai Second Medical University, PhD degree in computer-aided surgery from Hong Kong University in 1999, and Master of Science in Clinical Research at UT-Houston in 2006. He currently is the Director of Surgical Planning Laboratory and Professor of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at Houston Methodist Hospital in Texas USA. He is Professor of Surgery (Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery) at Weill Medical College of Cornell University. He is also Guest Professor of Oral and Craniomaxillofacial Surgery at Shanghai Ninth People's Hospital, Shanghai Jiaotong University School of Medicine where he completed his residency. His research mainly focuses on computer-aided surgical simulation and image-guided surgery for craniomaxillofacial surgery. He received a numerous research grant support from United States government and industries. He has published more than 100 articles in peer-review journals.